Fell Beneath Train.

John Dodge, an engineer on the Louisville and Nashville railroad was run over and killed Sunday afternoon about 12:30 o'clock at Shawhan, five miles from Paris, when he fell beneath a moving train from which he was alighting. His body was horribly mangled.

Dodge was in charge of freight train second No. 50 which had stopped at Shawhan for orders. Train No. 43 also stopped at Shawhan for orders, and Dodge after receiving his orders jumped on the engine of 43 to ride to his own engine which was a short distance away. In getting off he slipped and fell beneath the moving locomotive, the tender of the engine passing over his body and dragging it for some distance.

His mangled remains were brought to Paris at 2:30 o'clock and taken to the undertaking establishment of Geo. W. Davis where they were prepared for burial and sent to his home in Covington Sunday night. Dodge is survived by a wife and several children.

Growers Will Ask McCreary's Aid.

New life has been imparted to the tobacco grower in Kentucky since the election of James B. McCreary for Governor. The growers have the promise of the Governor elect that he will help them right the wrongs done them. In a letter to the tobacco growers Mr. McCreary promised to aid the tobacco growers in every way to pass such legislation as will be necessary to protect them and enforce the law against the Tobacco Trust. With this promise direct from the Governor-elect there will be several measures drawn up and submitted to him before the Legislature meets with the request that he submit the one he thinks best to the Legislature along with his message, for unless something is done to aid the grower the tobacco crop will be greatly reduced in acreage in this state next season. As Mr. McCreary has stated since his election that he would endeavor to carry out his campaign pledges much is expected from him in assistance from the tobacco growers.

Dante's "Inferno" at the Grand.

The filming of Dante's "Inferno" marks a new epoch in moving pictures, in more respects than one. Until now, the moving picture has been housed in humble quarters compared to the legitimate stage, and its environments have been of a corresponding character. Indeed the legitimate stage kept the moving picture at a distance as an undesirable relative. All this has now been changed, and the picture has made a triumphant entry into the show houses of the country. It is not, of course, the ordinary moving picture to which the doors of the great theaters have been opened, but the feature film, dealing with a subject rich and interesting enough to constitute an evening's entertainment. Of these feature films easily the first is Dante's "Inferno." Only those who are at least in a fair degree familiar with the poem can appreciate the seemingly unsurmountable obstacles which make the maker ambitious enough to render this great creation into moving pictures. There was but one way to solve the problem, and this was the most difficult way of all, to follow with literal fidelity all the conceptions and fancies of the poet. This is the way that the makers of the film have chosen, and it has led them to success.

From the first canto to the last one is struck by the startling realism of each foot of film. Take, for example, the first canto. The wandering of the poet through the dark and gloomy forest, his adventure with the wild beast, his repeated attempt to ascend the hill of salvation, the flight from the famished wolf, the descent of Beatrice from the realm of the blessed into the limbo of Virgil, the pious poet of pagan antiquity, are rendered with such a fascinating power that one loses sight of the fact he is watching a picture and not realities. The wonder grows as the picture progresses. Dante's "Inferno" will be seen at the Paris Grand Wednesday, November 29 and 30, with matinee on Thanksgiving day.
